Congo's Political-Economic Situation

DR Congo has been in the news again for political unrest. The campaign to elect a new president was supposed to begin on Sept. 19, since the constitution limits the head of state to two terms & President Kabila's 2nd terms ends on Dec. 20. Recently the electoral commission declared that no elections can be held until a new census has been taken & Kabila will remain in power until elections. Opposition parties have boycotted the "dialogue" claiming it favors the president; they planned peaceful demonstrations for Sept. 19. Government security forces opened fire; in Kinshasa opposition neighborhoods were surrounded by military. Most people remained within doors, children did not attend school, food was scarce with shops closed. Some calm has now returned but it is precarious. The Catholic bishops have withdrawn from the "dialogue." International sanctions aimed at helping Congo keep to its constitution have not (yet) had much effect & Kabila is working to change the constitution. Please keep our sisters & brothers in your thoughts & prayers.
